

It's not about a naked boob. It's about not giving us parents the choice to allow or not allow our children to watch. It's about pretending it isn't intentional, when quite clearly it was. (I'll have you naked...) And it's really about the message it sends that it is OK to rip off a woman's clothes. Shame on CBS, MTV and the performers.